Objectives:

By the end of the seminar series the students should be able to:

1. Explain the role of empowerment in health promotion at the practice level;
2. Explain the differences between a bottom-up and top-down approach;
3. Define an activist activity in health promotion;
4. Explain why health promotion is important in the context of infectious disease outbreaks.

The seminar series is open to all the students of UNITrento (Laurea Triennale e Magistrale) and external people (nursing students).

Credits and Assessment:
The minimum hours of attendance “in presence” cannot be less than 75%.
Students are expected to attend and to present a reflection on a key topic in the series in small groups (max 20 minutes) in English. The instructor will provide students with the guidelines and the necessary materials during the introductory and concluding class and through Moodle. Upon the successful completion of the seminar series and the presentation, DSRS students will be recognised 2CFU.

Registration: Registration open online until Wednesday the 14th September at http://www.sociologia.unitn.it/100/seminari-di-credito
